

ATTEMPT TO ROB BANK AT DARIEN

Safe of Farmers' State Bank Blown Up Early This Morning.

WAKE UP CITIZENS

Used Too Much Nitro-Glycerine, and Failed To Get Any Money.

THE ROBBERS ESCAPE

Darien, Wis., Nov. 8.—(Special)—This little village was thrown into violent excitement about 2:30 o'clock this morning by the noise of a tremendous explosion followed immediately by loud cries of "robbers! robbers! Get your guns! Get your guns!"

In less time than it takes to tell the main street of the place was filled with all sorts of people in various styles of dishabille looking for the cause of all this hubbub.

The advance guard of disturbed citizens got on the street just in time to see three men in long fur overcoats with cloth caps drawn deep over their heads jump into a rubber tired buggy drawn by a single horse and disappear down the other end of the street.

The burglar holding the reins also used the whip vigorously and the horse was running for all that he was worth and the rig was soon beyond reach. It took a course on the county road toward Janesville.

After getting over their astonishment several parties started out in pursuit but returned this morning without having gained sight of the rig or its occupants.

It was found upon examination that the Farmers' State Bank building had been entered from the rear and nitro-glycerine used to open the big safe in the rear part of the place. Evidently the burglars were amateurs at the business because the charge they applied was much too large. It not only blew away the outer covering of the safe but everything else in the building and made a noise that would wake the dead.

The marauders knew at once that there was no use in trying to get the cash in the safe and they made tracks to get away as fast as possible.

There was between four and five thousand dollars in the safe and a large amount of securities which were negotiable. The inner door of the safe was untouched. The Farmers' State Bank has a capital of $25,000. Its officers are William Blakely, president, and John R. Egan, cashier.

Several strange men have been hanging around Darien lately and their actions aroused some suspicions. In comparing these strangers with the description of the men who were seen escaping it is believed they were the same.

It is thought that they came from Beloit some time during the night. They failed in their effort to rob the bank just because they used too much nitro-glycerine in the blowing up of the safe.

Word has been sent out in every direction giving a description of the robbers. They were three large men with fur overcoats and cloth caps and the horse was a large bay and the rig a rubber tired top covered buggy.

MISS STONE IS HEARD FROM.

Letter Dated Nov. 1 Says Writer and Companion Are Well.

New York, Nov. 8.—The messenger sent by M. Bakhtmetoff, the Russian diplomatic agent, to the brigands has returned, bearing a letter from Miss Stone to a former pupil at Sofia, says the Sofia correspondent of the Journal and Advertiser. "M. Bakhtmetoff, having thus established communications, has turned the letter and details over to Mr. Dickinson, the American consul-general, saying the latter has the ransom, and upon him rests the responsibility. The messenger was absent nine days. The letter is dated Nov. 1 and is written in Bulgarian by Miss Stone, but controlled by the brigands. It consists of half a page, saying Miss Stone and Mme. Talika are well and that the latter expects a baby in three weeks. It expresses hope for speedy release. M. Bakhtmetoff's messenger also brought a letter to Mr. Dickinson from Miss Stone. The brigands decline to trust Mr. Dickinson's men and characterize his offer as paltry.

Charged With Assault.

In the municipal court this afternoon information was filed by District Attorney W. A. Jackson against James Ward and George Woodruff, of Beloit, charging them with assaulting Frank Vayette, also of Beloit, with a piece of rubber hose filled with sand and stealing $15 from him on the night of Oct. 28. The examination took place in justice court in Beloit and they were remanded to the municipal court for trial. They were brought up from Beloit this morning and taken before Judge Fifield at 2 o'clock. Both are young men and are quite boyish looking. They pleaded not guilty and the case was adjourned to Monday, Nov. 18. Silas Menzie of Beloit is counsel for James Ward and Cornelius Buckley is Woodruff's attorney.

HUNTING MATCH AT EDGERTON

forces of Frank Ash Win by Some 800 Points—Will McIntosh Was Second.

The hunting match which was planned by some of the citizens of Edgerton took place yesterday. Carl Peters was appointed captain of one side and Frank Ash of the other, there being eight on a side. Several kinds of game were on the list, each counting a stated number of points. The time allowed for hunting was from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

When the game was counted last night the victory was decided in favor of Frank Ash's forces by some 800 points, the total number of points for his side being some 3,200. Will McIntosh scored the highest individual count having 1,750. The losing side will furnish supper for the crowd some time in the near future.

BAPTIST CHURCH MISSION WORK

Thanksgiving Meetings of the Local Society Yesterday—Addresses by Returned Missionaries

Yesterday was a day of exceptionally strong missionary interest at the Baptist church and one so unusually delightful and interesting that it would make a strong impression on everyone who shared in the inspiration of the meetings.

In the afternoon at 4 o'clock the members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society held their annual Thanksgiving meeting at which they entertained the officers of the missionary societies of the other churches.

Miss Amanda Horkimer had charge of the program which included words of greeting from Mrs. Q. O. Sutherland, representing the Congregational society; Mrs. J. T. Henderson, for the Presbyterian society; Mrs. C. A. Hunt for the missionary society of Court Street M. E. church and Miss Williams for the women of the First M. E. Church.

The work of the Baptist church was represented by various interesting reports from the foreign mission fields. Mrs. Elizabeth Butler reported the progress of missions in the Philippines for the past year; Mrs. Anderson spoke of what had been accomplished in Japan; Mrs. Gear reported for Africa; Mrs. M. McDonald, for the Philippines and Miss Flora Dunwiddie for China.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Openshaw recently returned from missionary labors in China, were present and Mr. Openshaw spoke very briefly to the ladies emphasizing especially the need for more workers willing to go and the advisability of the plan of station work, that is each society taking a share in the support of some certain station as its work.

At the close of the afternoon meeting a missionary tea was served, which proved to be a genuine New England supper, including all the good things which belong by tradition to the Thanksgiving sermon. It was an elegant supper and about one hundred people were served. The tables were lighted by Jack-o'-lanterns making a unique effect.

At 7:30 o'clock the regular prayer meeting service was devoted to hearing the message from China brought by Mr. and Mrs. Openshaw, both of whom are earnest, consecrated young people who are very attractive personally and who tell their story in an unusually fascinating manner. They have been stationed at Kalling, S. Chuan province, Western China, being the farthest west of any of the Chinese missionaries.

After Mrs. Openshaw's address Miss Elizabeth Palmer sang sweetly an exquisite sacred song, "Unanswered" by J. W. Blakely, the blind organist of Washington, formerly of this city. Prof. J. S. Taylor played her accompaniment.

Mr. and Mrs. Openshaw sang a Chinese song and then Mr. Openshaw told many interesting things concerning China. He was dressed in full Chinese costume of rich silk.

FAMOUS WOMAN ARTIST DIES

Kate Greenaway, Whose Pictures Delight Children, Passes Away.

London, Nov. 8.—Miss Kate Greenaway, the artist, is dead. She was an Englishwoman, but was almost as well known in America as in Great Britain and was famous for her work in bringing about a reform in the dress of children. Her dainty pictures of quaint little people in picturesque costumes, of trim gardens and wonderful flowers have enchanted the children of several generations and have given much pleasure to the older folks. Miss Greenaway's first great success was due to the card fever, when people began to send their friends pretty tokens of the various festive seasons of the year. Marcus Ward, the publisher, saw her drawings and secured from her seventy exquisite pictures that brought her fame in many countries. Her "Little Folks" Painting Book and "Under the Window," containing drawings of children, made her a celebrity. Miss Greenaway inherited her art from her father, a genius at wood-engraving. She was about 50 years old and lived in a picturesque old house on Hampstead heath, London.

MILLIONS CHANGED HANDS IN GOTHAM

George Wheelock Is the Heaviest Winner and Dave Johnson the Largest Loser.

New York, Nov. 8.—Many of the wagers made on the result of the mayoralty election were settled during the day. Shepard's backers agreeing to accept the statements as published in the morning papers as final. The amount of money placed on the result in the Wall street district alone amounted to over $2,000,000; and about $500,000 more was staked up town. The heaviest winner was said to be George Wheelock, a book-maker, and the heaviest loser was said to be "Davy" Johnson, an uptown book-maker. Both are understood to have acted as agents.

Estimates as to the amount of money wagered on the election in Wall street offices differ, but a conservative guess places it at not less than $500,000. In the majority of cases low betters gave odds of ten to nine to ten to seven, and in a few instances bets of two to one on the mayoralty contest were reported. A few wagers were placed on the district attorneyship at odds of two to one in Unger's favor, and a few bets were made on Van Wyck's defeat.

CONFESSES TO A THEFT OF $57,000

C. D. Thompson, Macabees Financial Keeper, Admits His Guilt.

Order Will Be at No Loss. Port Huron, Mich., November 8.—Charles H. Thompson, supreme finance keeper of the Supreme Tent of the Knights of the Macabees, is a self-confessed defaulter in the sum of $57,000. He took the money to aid his own imperiled business interests and it is thought that almost the entire amount was abstracted from the money paid to him during October. Large as the defalcation is it is less than a quarter of the month's receipts.

Mr. Thompson's office is at Port Huron, Mich., where the order has been managed ever since the organization twenty-one years ago, but he is well-known in this city, which is one of the strongholds of the Macabees, the Chicago lodge having 17,000 members, without counting the 8,000 women who belong to the affiliated order of the Ladies of the Macabees.

His bid defalcation will, however, not cause more than a moment's ripple in the financial affairs of the benevolent order, for he is under bonds of $75,000 from the Fidelity and Casualty company.

NEW CLAIMS AGAINST TURKEY

Other Powers Are Likely to Follow the Lead of France.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 8.—The newspapers here anticipate that, following the lead of France, other powers will discover claims against Turkey. The Russian newspapers generally welcome the French naval demonstration in Turkish waters as a setback to what the Russians terms "German pretensions in Turkey."

It is believed Russia has not been consulted by France in regard to the step now taken by the latter country and there is an impression that St. Petersburg does not approve it unreservedly. The Russians at first boo-hoed the French grievances, but M. Constans, the French ambassador to the porte, did not allow even Russian interests to be considered before the interests of France. The correspondent remarks that the influence of France in the east, which has been reduced since the initiation of the Franco-Russian alliance, may now be restored by France's unaided efforts. The Berlin Vossische Zeitung ironically asserts that France as "protector of the Roman Catholics in the orient" must now demand compensation from Emperor Nicholas as protector of the Greek church for the injuries sustained by the Franciscans.

The correspondent adds that in certain continental quarters it is regarded as possible that Syria may be the rock upon which the Franco-Russian alliance will one day be split.

Alaska Building on Fire.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The Alaska building and the Crane ethnological and botanical collection at the pan-American exposition were destroyed by fire at 8:15 o'clock, causing a loss of $40,000, without insurance.

SHOT GUARDS AND ESCAPED

Mutiny Occurs Among 400 Federal Prisoners at Fort. Leavenworth.

FLEE INTO WOODS

Several Guards Are Wounded and One of the Convicts Is Killed.

TWENTY-SIX ARE GONE

Leavenworth, Nov. 8.—The convicts who made a successful attempt to escape from the United States prison yesterday morning are still at large this morning. Those wounded in the scuffle are resting easy. The indications point to the fact that the revolt was planned several months ago. Fort, the convict killed, was a civil prisoner from Ryan, Neb.

Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 8.—Twenty-eight desperate convicts, after killing one guard and seriously wounding 26 others, escaped from the new Federal prison yesterday afternoon. They are armed with fully a score of guns and revolvers, taken from the guards, and are now at large west of the city. Troops from Fort Leavenworth, guards from the prison, and police from the city are in pursuit, but there is little hope of capturing the men today.

The mutiny at the new federal prison is the worst of the kind which ever occurred here. About 400 of the convicts in the Federal prison at Fort Leavenworth are taken each day from the old prison to the site of the new one now in progress of erection, and there they work upon the new buildings. The new prison is surrounded by a temporary stockade or fence and is guarded by thirty guards. It is here that the convicts escaped today.

Threw Up Their Hands. About 3:30 o'clock four convicts marched into the office of Superintendent F. Hines. With Hines were W. F. Carroll, master stone cutter, and Harmon Bone, another official. The convicts were armed with revolvers. They cried out: "We want you; throw up your hands."

The officers threw up their hands and they were then commanded to walk out of the door. The convicts marched their prisoners in front of them to the west gate of the prison, holding the revolvers against their necks. The guards on the outer walls were alarmed at this time, and as they approached the sentry at the gate, Guard Hoffman, stationed there raised his gun to fire at them but Superintendent Hines cried out to him to stop or he would kill the officers. The convicts forced him to surrender.

Armed With Guns. Here the convicts who had been joined by twenty-four others, took possession of the guns left at the gate by the guards who were on duty inside the walls. They secured three Winchester, several shot-guns, and a number of revolvers. Thus armed the gang of desperate men turned from the gate which they could not open, and started for the south side of the prison site, marching the captured officers in front of them.

The guards stationed in the towers on the walls began firing at the escaping convicts. Guard Tilpart, held by the convicts, dashed from in front of them and around a corner of a building and escaped. He was fired upon by the prisoners but was only slightly wounded.

As the convicts rushed for the south side of the prison site the fusillade from the armed guards on the wall became furious. Several hundred shots were fired, but only one convict was killed and one wounded. This occurred at the south wall, where they stopped to batter down the wall of heavy upright timbers.

One Convict Killed. Guard Waldrup, who was stationed nearby in a tower was shooting at the convicts. The fire was returned and Waldrup fell wounded in the stomach. He raised himself and shot a convict dead. Another, shot from a convict struck Waldrup in the forehead and he fell mortally wounded. Another convict, colored, was wounded in the fight at the wall where they escaped.

A hole was rammed through the wall by the convicts and they went out on the run. Several of their number were slightly wounded but escaped with them. The convicts remaining in the prison cheered the escaping desperados. The latter were short term men and did not care to leave. The prisoners went southwest from the city securing several farmers teams and buggies as they went, forcing them to give them up.

Rescue Smallpox Patients.

Des Moines, Nov. 8.—Tracy Home, a hospital in which fifteen smallpox patients were quarantined, was badly damaged by fire here. The inmates were rescued, the firemen and police risking exposure to the contagion.

EXPOSITION OF MANUAL TRAINING; DECLARATION BY PROF. GEO. M. BRACE

Training of the Hand Gives Mental Power—Science Has Adopted the Manual Training Idea.

Reader, do you know the answer to this question? Perhaps you think you do, and you may be right; but it is safe to say that you are in the minority if you can satisfactorily answer it.

Manual training is not a new idea in this country, as Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson both included the idea in their plans for an academy. But their thoughts were more nearly those of the public to-day than those of the educators of today, namely: the teaching of a trade to both boys and girls.

One sentence contains the reason for the existence of manual training departments in our public school system and that is the well known fact that "Training of the hand gives mental power."

Greek, algebra and many other subjects have for a long time been incorporated in our curricula not for the practical value they may have as merely information subjects, but because of the mental power they develop, which is after all the desideratum in all education. It would be impossible to furnish each pupil of our schools with the information he will need in life's journey, for who can see into the future far enough to determine what it has in store, or who can guess what new problems and questions must be met and answered in the prosecution of our profession? Our education must develop and establish in each individual a basis, a sure foundation, a base of supplies which will furnish the material necessary to cope with the difficulties as they arise. There can be no question in the minds of educated people concerning the above platitude: It has long been recognized and acknowledged. Not many years ago the sciences were taught from books later the principle of Pestalozzi entered the class room, and we stood open-eyed and open-minded as the truths of science were demonstrated with the apparatus in the hands of the teacher; but today Froebel's idea has taken possession, and the pupil performs the experiments.

Science has in this way adopted the manual training idea; it is the pupil's hand that creates the conditions, his eye that watches the changes, and his mind that reaches the conclusions; and such are the results in intellectual development that Greek Latin and mathematics are no longer considered as the only intellectual subjects for college training. What the manual training idea has done for science teaching it will do for mathematics and kindred subjects. Judge Orrin N. Carter, of Cook county gave a talk last Saturday to principals of the Chicago schools, in which he pointed out to them the general dissatisfaction among professional and business men regarding the teaching of practical things in our schools. Any one who doubts the existence of this dissatisfaction needs but enter the business places of Janesville and make inquiries.

The trouble has been that the pupil has had no opportunity to sense such a subject of arithmetic. He commits facts to memory, and, if memory be good, he stands well in his classes; but the subject does not touch his life or experience. Put that pupil into the manual training school—the boy into the shop and the girl in the kitchen—and at once mathematical facts become distinct ideas. Many, possibly the majority, of those who favor manual training understand it is intended to develop mechanical skill and prepare students for industrial pursuits. What is manual training then if it is not the teaching of handicraft or trades? It does all of this, but its purpose in education is to develop and enrich the intellect, to develop the power of concentration and sensibility, and is elevating in that it is the worst foe to vice and crime in that the ranks of the vicious and criminal are not replenished by busy young men and women.

It is the duty of schools to produce parallel growths of all the faculties, leaving the pupils free to swing out in life with no distorted tastes or narrowed views. The training of the hand ministers to this parallel development; the pupil has been touched by the activities of a miniature world and his powers are greater because he can better command them. As a result his academic studies are learned more easily and better.

It is the opinion of the best educators that a manual training pupil is a better student of history or languages than he would be without manual training; his mental activities respond as never before, and the listless, careless boy begins to think as a man.

Good as these general benefits are they are not the sum; there are special benefits in many cases. Take the boy whose memory is poor, who lacks in imagination, and who has felt the sting of the teacher's verdict—"stupid." He has lost self-reliance and courage, takes little interest in school, impatiently waits for vacations when his pent-up energy finds free expression. In other activities where he often proves he has faculties of no mean order. Put the pupil into manual training work and he is as bright as his classmates—indeed he often excels here; self-reliance springs into life, he begins to think he is not so stupid as his teachers have claimed and hope revives. Slowly but surely he emerges from his mental gloom and becomes a strong, clear-headed student.

An intellect has been saved to the nation and a human life made larger and capable of greater enjoyment. There are some things regarding manual training that should be kept constantly in mind.

First—That although it does teach trades and manual dexterity, that is not its purpose.

Second—That all mental activity develops brain power.

Third—That the active life of today demands as never before a practical education.

Fourth—That schools do not develop self-reliance, quick and accurate judgment in any greater degree than they did twenty-five years ago.

Fifth—That manual training claims that it is a solution of the question as to how to meet these demands.

FOANCES GAUNT, AS "BARBARA FSETCHIE."

Clyde Fitch, the author of Barbara Fretchie, spent many of his boyhood days in Frederick, Maryland, where the scenes of his play are laid. He has put some of his memories of the old town in his play and has used the legend upon which Whittier founded his famous poem, in his own way with a result which justifies his employment of the old material and the old name. He has put some of his customary touches of humor in the earlier scenes. The children playing hide-and-seek on a summer evening, the remarks of the coquetish village belle, and some of the minor doings are of a quality he has made familiar in his other plays. But he has worked this time on a larger canvas, with a freer hand. The greater and finer scenes of his play have noble proportions. "Barbara

STOMACHS THAT WON'T WORK.

That Retain the Food and Refuse to Digest It, Makes the Head Heavy and the Nerves Weak, Need Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

There is a cure for dyspepsia. Sufferers who have tried noxious nostrums will probably be skeptical, but skepticism vanishes when Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are tried. Whether the trouble is dyspepsia of long standing, or merely a simple case of indigestion, relief is prompt and pronounced. The less the trouble the fewer tablets need be taken.

Heaviness after eating, sour stomach, as indicated by belching, fatigue with slight exertion or with no exertion at all, disturbed sleep, nervousness, constipation, depression, "blues," these things can commonly be set down as symptoms of dyspepsia. And dyspepsia is merely indigestion in an aggravated form.

By promoting perfect digestion, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, produce strong nerves, restful, refreshing sleep, pure blood, and good sound, healthy flesh. They make the skin clear, the eyes bright, the mind cheerful.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a medicine and more than a medicine. They digest the food and make it easy of assimilation, and they relieve the inflamed, diseased condition of the membranous linings and the glands of the stomach and bowels. They help the digestive organs over the hard places, and put them into a healthy, active condition. They effect a quick and permanent cure. You don't have to continue taking them forever, still it is well to have a box handy and take one at the first return of the trouble.

Perfectly well people are made sick by eating too much, or unwholesome food, but not if they take a tablet after eating. Treatment with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets does not necessitate dieting or any change of habits. They digest the proper food and act upon the other kind in such a way as to make it pass off quickly and harmlessly. You may eat and drink what you like, and as much as you like, if you take a tablet afterwards.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by all druggists at 5¢ cents for full sized package.

WHEN WHITEHEAD WAS A COLLEGIAN

He Worked His Way Through School, But Would Not Act as Table Waiter.

Editor Amos P. Wilder, of the Madison State Journal, attended the Centennial reunion recently held at Yale college, and in his write-up of the occasion he speaks of Hon. J. M. Whitehead, of Janesville, as follows: I find Whitehead is being watched with interest by the men who knew him at Williston preparatory school and Yale. I knew the Janesville man worked his way, but a classmate tells me John was distinctive in his struggles.

Perhaps there was no poorer man in his class. It is said one suit of clothes saw him through the course and no man was more respected. On graduation day, a sort of day of judgment for collegians, Whitehead was cheered to the echo. He did so much outside work for a living that his scholarship was not marked enough to equip him to "tutor" defective students, but he worked at whatever his hands found to do. Unlike many, Whitehead would not "wait on table"—a favorite way of earning college support; nor would he do other menial tasks of this sort. Not because he was ashamed to do any honest task, but he preferred to toil with his hands in odd hours and vacations, in trenches or anywhere else. The Yale "push" have great confidence in Whitehead, whose good sense, integrity and powers of leadership were conceded when he was a boy.

PATRONS MUST USE GOVERNMENT BOX

Instructions by the Postoffice Department for People on Rural Mail Routes.

The postoffice authorities wish to inform the patrons of rural delivery routes that they must use one of the fourteen kinds of boxes recommended by the government. They may be secured of the postmaster in Janesville. Letters addressed to people along the route must be addressed to Janesville must also contain in the address the letters R. F. D. and the number of the route.

Those getting mail at other points must have it changed to Janesville. It is against the rules of the department to intercept the mails.

Hunters and any others who might interfere with the boxes are warned that it is a serious offense and will be prosecuted by the United States authorities.

After the first day of next July it is understood that he carriers on the rural delivery routes of the country will be paid $500 a year each. They are now paid $500 a year, which the present carriers say is small compensation for the work in view of the fact that their time schedules are so arranged that they cannot do much in the way of carrying packages, delivering messages, etc., for the farmers.

The service is being extended to very part of the country. The postmaster general will ask for $3,500,000 more money from the coming congress than he was granted by its predecessor and it is thought that it will be allowed without opposition.

Thousands of petitions are now in Washington from farmers all over the Union who are anxious for the service. It is not very long until congress convenes, and just as soon as the appropriation bill passes the work of extending the service will be started again with renewed energy. Communities that want the delivery should waste no time in getting their petitions in.

The Alaska Mosquito.

Mosquitoes in Alaska is a subject that one wants to pay attention to. They are here by the billions, writes a gold prospector. It is impossible to go out in the evening without a head-net and a pair of gloves. They will bite through your clothing as easily as if you had nothing on at all. When they make your acquaintance they always leave you a present in the shape of a hard lump under the cuticle that is full of water. To open this you are sure to have a sore spot for several days. It seems that the sting of a mosquito here is more poisonous than that of his brother in the States. If the mosquitoes carry the germs of malarial fever I cannot understand how it is that the population of Alaska lives

Italian Girls Don't Flirt.

The girls of Italy are denied many privileges that their American sisters enjoy. Chief among these is that they do not flirt, nor are they parties to the love-making that results ultimately in their becoming wives. This applies to the upper classes. Among the lower classes the youths are freer to please themselves and there is no lack of furious lovemaking, seasoned with jealousy, estrangements, peacemakings tears and smiles, as Mother Nature intended it to be. But there is no flirting. Love is taken very seriously, and on the girl's side at least is indulged in with marriage as the end in view.

GOVERNOR AND HIS TRAIN.

Marquette Eagle: "Some of the democratic newspapers are attempting to hold the republican party responsible for the campaign trip of last fall, when Robt. M. La Follette toured the state in a special car and train, which had the right of way everywhere, and which the sworn statements show cost only $55.55 per day. Unfortunately, the party is obliged to take a small part of the blame for this transaction, though it ought not to be credited with all of it. When Mr. La Follette, long posing as the ardent critic of the railroad corporations, was nominated for governor, it was not thought possible that he would so truckle to them as to consent to be their beneficiary in a matter of that kind. No one believed that he would accept a service of that kind at less than the regular rates. No one would have believed that he, one of the champions of the anti-pass movement, would have been one of the first to break the law in letter and spirit. The arrangements made for that train were not those of the republican party, as such, but of Mr. La Follette and a few of his innermost circle of friends and backers. Had the state central committee as a body acted on the matter instead of the chairman, or Mr. La Follette, we do not believe that the charge could be laid at the door of the party. Here we say that the party, as such, is unfortunate rather than blameworthy for the action of its candidate. That the great body of republicans in the state do not approve of the special favors then received from the railroads is a matter of common knowledge. They were misled and deceived by one whom they believed at the time of his nomination was an honest reformer, but whose subsequent acts belie the belief."

The railroad company had the right to make any kind of a transportation contract that it desired. The Marquette paper has a right however to criticize Governor La Follette for being a party to railroad favoritism. The anti-pass law was a forced measure, sprung upon a republican convention by A. R. Hall, about the only honest supporter of the measure in the party. It was attached to the platform as a matter of policy, pure and simple, as was evident to every man in attendance when the act was performed. Governor La Follette and the men that were shouting for him in the convention, saw an opportunity to attach the farce to the list of reform measures, and due credit was claimed for forcing the convention to adopt it.

The $1,000 train was an object lesson, and people have been guessing ever since, how a reform governor could be a party to that kind of reform. This is a world of surprises, and Wisconsin is not destitute of political material.

JUSTICE TO ADMIRAL SCHLEY.

The government should pay the cost of the Schley investigation, and reimburse the gallant officer who has been persecuted, rather than prosecuted, by a court of inquiry. Waterway may be the decision of this august body, Admiral Schley is not only vindicated in the court of public opinion, but his recital of the famous bombardment off Santiago has so refreshed the memory that his title of hero is not only reestablished, but new lustre is added to his name. Admiral Schley is the victim of jealousy on the part of a handful of brother officers. Jealousy of a peculiar brand, known only to army and navy circles. While the people were exultant over the success of a navy of which any nation might be proud, and while the world paid tribute to gallant officers and capable men, this little coterie of naval officials, green with envy, and purple with indignation, was plotting to tarnish the fair name, and belittle the character of the man, who, by accident, happened to be the leader in a noted engagement, forcing him at last, in defense of honor, to demand a court of investigation.

The whole thing from start to finish has been a disgrace to the nation.

The American navy is not composed of a flagship and half a dozen admirals, who through prestige, won by seniority, happened to be at the front in the war with Spain.

In the late engagement, was not a flagship or admiral's victory. The glory that succeeded, was bright enough to light up the hold of every battleship, where brave and loyal men were faithfully performing the hard and homely tasks of duty, prompted by the same spirit of patriotism that inspired the heart of the man on the bridge or in the fighting top.

The victory won was broad enough to cover every craft that floated the stars and stripes, whether engaged in transport service or at the front. Back of the victory and the honor was the nation, to which the navy owed its existence and efficiency. Every shot that was fired at Manila and at Santiago, with such telling effect, spoke volumes for the men behind the guns. When five hundred men volunteered to join the little blockading squadron, with the Merrimack, the act said to the world, the American navy is composed of the right kind of material.

When the short and decisive war was over, the navy, and not the flagships, and officers in command alone, was the pride of the nation, and a surprise to the world. It has lost none of its glory, but the unseemly fight on one of its most gallant and worthy officers, has tarnished its fair name, and the victory won by either side will be destitute of honor or anything else worth recording in history. Admiral Schley was forced into this contest against his wishes. The investigation has been expensive for him, and whether he wins or loses, he should not be called upon to foot the bill. Public sentiment is with him as an officer, and has been from the eventful day when he led his fleet to victory. Congress should reimburse him for needless expense. The people will approve of the act, and the man is entitled to this much consideration.

MANUAL TRAINING.

In another part of the paper will be found a communication from Professor Brace, the manual training instructor in the High school. Mr. Brace makes a very strong plea for this very practical branch of education, and while he fully appreciates the value of literary attainment, and is fully equipped mentally, for this class of work, he recognizes that the education of the hand and all that goes with it is of vital importance.

The world is long on good people who, are dependent upon the brain and ability of some one else to find them employment, and the means of livelihood. Not that it is a disgrace to be an employee in any honest calling, but there is an air of dependance about it that should never satisfy the ambition of any young man or woman, when ready to take up the responsibilities of life.

Mental training, with a text book foundation, develops only one side of a boy or girl. Add to it manual training, and you combine the practical, and turn out well rounded and fully developed men and women, who possess not only the ability to do something, but who in acquiring that ability, have learned to respect the dignity of labor, an important lesson that no boy or girl can afford to miss. Many an intelligent man has gone through life on a clerkship at a meagre salary, who might have been an independent artisan, if back in the years of development, he had been taught in school to run a planer and drive a nail.

Well developed mechanical genius, is the open door not only to independence, but to a field of activity that contains great possibilities.

Better the boy behind the plane at $10 per week, with a love for his work, than the boy behind the counter at the same salary, unless he possesses commercial ability and ambition that will make him more than a clerk. Janesville is fortunate in having a manual training department. It is entitled to every encouragement. Results will warrant liberal support, because it deals with the practical side of life and is removed from the field of fade, that at the present time infest the public schools.

UNJUSTLY CRITICISED.

Governor Durbin of Indiana, is being criticised by the democratic press for the authority he has assumed regarding ex-Governor Taylor. The Indiana official refused to recognize extradition papers for Taylor's return to Kentucky for trial in connection with the Goebel murder. Whatever opinion democracy may entertain concerning Governor Durbin's position, public sentiment, at least, is with him. Kentucky justice just now is a byword, and the courts of that state are so partisan, that a fair and impartial trial is out of the question, if in any way connected with the Goebel murder case.

The trial of ex-State Treasurer Powers was a farce, that the governor of Indiana fully realized. The same court would have to do with Taylor, and the prejudice against him, would have found him guilty without the aid of a court.

It may be unpleasant for ex-Governor Taylor to be an exile, but freedom in Indiana is better by far than a cell in his own state.

The holocaust at Hurley and the loss of life attending, is a sad chapter in the every day history of events. People who have denounced the wickedness of the little northern a city will claim that Providence had something to do with it, as they did at the time of the Chicago fire. The responsibility, however, rests with the town for its fire traps in the way of buildings.

And now General Buller is sorry that he spoke. Admiral Dewey found himself in a similar predicament after his return to Washington. The tongue is more dangerous than the sword, and no muscle is required to handle it.

If Governor La Follette wants to ride on a thousand dollar train, why shouldn't he? Great men frequently change their minds, and circumstances alter cases. The poor fellows that are complaining are in luck to travel by freight.

PRESS COMMENT.

Superior Telegram: The reported fight of the two tobacco combinations to control the trade read like a pipe dream.

Richland Center Observer: Gen. Buller has been politely requested by the British war office to use the soft pedal on his voice.

La Crosse Republican and Leader: If one of the duties of a state tax commissioner is to go about maligning republican leaders of national reputation, then there will be one less commission for the tax payers to support.

Milwaukee Sentinel: Senator Tillman declares that no gentleman of the south will sit at the table with the president after the Booker Washington incident, but they would probably not refuse to stand up to his pie counter.

Milwaukee Journal: Lieut. Gov. Baensch says: "In the case of Stalwarts versus La Follette, I propose to remain with the rank and file." Perhaps somebody will tell us if this means more or less than the judge will stand with the fellows who win.

Green Bay Gazette: As to the governor dictating to the next legislature the republicans of Wisconsin will see to it that men are sent to Madison who have minds of their own. The legislature which re-elects John C. Spooner will not receive dictation from the governor nor anybody else. That much is settled.

Madison Journal: By a vote of 37 to 17, the Virginia constitutional convention has reconsidered its previous action and adopted a provision in the bill of rights upholding the freedom of the press and of speech. It declares, "that the freedom of the press is one of the great bulwarks of liberty, and can never be restrained."

Neenah Times, Dem.: A peculiarity just now among those newspapers owned by syndicates is that they are each booming some of their big stockholders for office. The Sheboygan Telegram is the latest paper of this kind to appear in this role, and it is booming ex-Mayor Fred A. Dennett for governor on the republican ticket. The Telegram better wait till it hears from Neenah.

Fond du Lac Reporter, Dem.: Some of the editors of the state are openly declaring that the Neenah News was purchased for Jake Bloom that he might wield his pen in the interests of the Hon. S. A. Cook for the nomination for governor on the republican ticket. Then it is not to be a La Follette organ after all?

Oshkosh Northwestern: A telephone girl at Seattle refused to connect a subscriber with the fire department because the man offended her by his haste. It proved to be a $50,000 fire and the telephone company, as been sued for damages on account of the negligence of the hello girl. Even the arrogance of a "central" must have a limit somewhere.

Racine Journal: The figures are supplied of the cost of that special train used by Governor La Follette in the last campaign. The cost is said to have been $55.00 per day for the motive power, a day coach and a combination eating and sleeping car. It is regarded as a very low rate, indeed, even if presumably by cash down in advance.

Appleton Post: Even the prohibition side of politics sometimes makes strange bedfellows. For instance, Wesley Mott, a leader in the prohibition movement in Winnebago county, recently appeared as the attorney for a Menasha saloon keeper in a case before the circuit court. It is to be hoped that Mr. Mott don't agree with his client to take his bill in trade.

La Crosse Chronicle: The merchant who has sufficient confidence in his wares to talk about them in the columns of the newspaper, seldom makes a mistake. His customers look for his announcements through this channel of public information, and no amount of ink and paper of the "special" sort can fill the bill. The merchant must advertise, and if he would make a success of it, he must advertise in the newspapers in preference to any other sort of publicity whatsoever.

ONE HORROR OF WAR

THE ARMY DISASTER AT BALL'S BLUFF, OCT. 21, 1861.

A Trifling Step That Cost Noble Lives—Advance of Massachusetts Men into Virginia—Call for Help, a Fight and a Panic.

[Copyright, 1901, by G. L. Kilmer.]

the game at last with the feeling that they had learned some things and could do better next time.

Four Federal regiments were under fire at Ball's Bluff, but the brunt of the fighting and loss fell upon the Fifteenth Massachusetts, which opened the battle. On Oct. 20 Colonel Charles Devens had crossed the Potomac to the bluffs on the Virginia side, intending to destroy a Confederate camp which the army scouts had reported lay close to the river. Pushing on toward Leesburg early on the 21st, Devens found no enemy and placed his regiment in the concealment of the woods at Ball's Bluff to await orders. Word came to him from division headquarters that he would be re-enforced. The bluff in rear of the position was very steep, and the only means of transporting troops to the danger point was by flatboats. During the forenoon some Massachusetts companies which had been left north of the river crossed and joined the advance, and these were the only Federals south of the river when the Confederates appeared in front and attacked the skirmishers. This was about midday. Seeing no help in sight, Colonel Devens formed his line for battle and was able to resist the vigorous attempts of the Confederates to turn his flank and cut him off from the boat landing.

Colonel Devens' regiment formed part of the brigade of Colonel E. D. Baker, which belonged to General C. P. Stone's division, having headquarters at Poolesville, Md., about five miles back from Ball's Bluff. Gorman's brigade of Stone's division lay at Edward's Ferry, five miles down the Potomac. The main Confederate force in the vicinity was in front of Gorman, and its commander, Colonel N. G. Evans, withdrew all his troops save one regiment from Gorman's front and marched to Ball's Bluff. General Stone, on hearing of Devens' engagement, ordered Colonel Baker either to retire the Massachusetts men or send the remainder of his brigade across the river to support. Baker immediately ordered the Twentieth Massachusetts, the Forty-second New York (Tammany regiment) and his own Seventy-first Pennsylvania (California regiment) to cross the river and went over in person to direct the movement.

The fresh troops toiled slowly across on the flatboat and up the steep, muddy bluff. Baker reached the front at 2 o'clock without any men, but was soon joined by one battalion of the Pennsylvania and a detachment of the Twentieth Massachusetts. The Massachusetts men held the right of the line. Next on the left were two howitzers and on their left the Pennsylvanians. A six pounder held the extreme left. Before the fight opened Colonel Cogswell reached the line with part of the Forty-second New York. He pointed out the weakness of the left flank to Baker, but no attention was paid to his words. The Confederates in front of Baker's left were posted on high ground screened by woods. In a few minutes after Colonel Cogswell uttered his warning the Eighth Virginia, under Colonel Eppa Hunton, opened fire from that point upon Baker's artillery. At the first volley every man at the Federal guns was shot down. So furious was this rifle fire that only three charges were fired from the cannon after the Virginians got to work. As fast as the gunners fell their places were filled by officers, and during the heat of the fight Colonel Cogswell and Colonel William Lee of the Twentieth Massachusetts as well as the aids on Baker's staff took a hand at serving the guns. One of the howitzers on its last discharge recoiled to the edge of the bluff.

Seizing their advantage, the Confederates pushed the fighting on the Federal left. Lieutenant Colonel Wistar, leading the Seventy-first Pennsylvania, was shot down, and Colonel Baker rushed forward to direct the line. Passing in front of the skirmishers to select ground for an advance he was instantly killed by a Confederate sharpshooter. Baker's death left the command in the hands of Colonel Cogswell, who at once put his own ideas of the affair into practice. He ordered Colonel Devens to march the Fifteenth Massachusetts to the extreme left, intending, if overpowered by the Confederates, to cut his way through by the left flank down the bluffs to the Potomac to the shelter of Gorman's camp at Edward's Ferry. Devens carried out the orders under fire, and just as he got a good line beyond the Pennsylvanians there occurred one of those disastrous blunders so common to raw soldiers. Two fresh companies of Colonel Cogswell's New York regiment came up and formed on the left of Devens' line. At that moment an officer in Confederate uniform showed himself in front of the New Yorkers and with shouts and gestures urged the Federals to charge into the woods in front. Some of the cool heads thought this was merely a challenge to dare the Yankees; others, not knowing the enemy's colors, took it for an order and rushed ahead. Some of the Fifteenth Massachusetts, carried away by enthusiasm, also charged forward until ordered back by Devens and his captains. The New Yorkers who went forward met a stinging fire from the enemy in the woods and came back in a panic. Colonel Cogswell said that at this time he attempted to have the whole line charge the enemy lodged in the hills in front of his left, but the confusion among the troops did not admit of it, and he ordered a retreat to the pitiful landing under the bluff. The flatboat was instantly swamped by a rush of men upon it.

The Confederates followed the retreating troops as far as the edge of the bluff and potted them on the bank below. Two companies of New Yorkers, freshly landed, climbed the bluff to cover the retreat, and Colonel Devens ordered his whole command to deploy for the same purpose. These men skirmished until dark, when those who clung to the bank were rushed by the Confederates and captured. When Colonel Devens saw that the day was lost, he told his men to save themselves. Some jumped into the river and swam to the Maryland side, with their muskets on their backs; others hid in the woods on the Virginia side and stole across a day or two after the battle. Many were shot while swimming to safety. The total loss of Baker's command was 40 killed, 168 wounded and 714 captured or missing. This loss fell upon about 1,700 men who crossed to the Virginia side. Colonel Evans' Confederate force also numbered about 1,700 and lost 148 killed and wounded.

Ball's Bluff aroused more indignation throughout the country than Bull Run. Colonel Baker was alternately glorified as a martyr and criticised as a military failure. He did not cross the Potomac to see what Devens had to contend with before ordering his brigade to go over and fight. Similar negligence in South Africa cost the British many disasters.

Colonel Cogswell stayed with his men on the Virginia bank and was captured. In his official report he indirectly placed the blame for the disaster upon Baker. He said that the transportation of troops across the river was badly organized. There were no guards and no detailed crews for the boats. The boats were not utilized to their full capacity, and cannon at hand on the Maryland side were not brought into action to cover the landing. In conclusion he said, "The dispositions on the field were faulty, in my judgment."

Baker's death threw the troops into confusion by depriving them of a head just at a trying time. His conduct in rushing into the enemy's fire was brave or rash, according to one's ideas of the duty of a commander. It is an axiom that one had general is better than two good ones. As soon as Baker fell the other colonels for a time acted each on his own hook without concert of action.

Baker was a United States senator from California. He had declined a commission as brigadier general and had one as major general under consideration at the time of his death. Congress called upon President Lincoln to investigate the Ball's Bluff disaster, and when he declined to do so it appointed the famous joint committee on the conduct of the war, with instructions to investigate "the most atrocious military murder in history." About this time General Stone came under a cloud in a manner not connected with the battle of Oct. 21, but he was arrested by order of the secretary of war and confined in Fort Lafayette, New York harbor. He was examined before the committee on the conduct of the war, but no charges were preferred against him. He was released after seven months' imprisonment and subsequently restored to active service under General Banks in the west. After the war he became noted as "Stonewall" in the army of the khedive.

The judgment of military men upon Stone's responsibility for Ball's Bluff was that he acted throughout the affair under a misapprehension. He supposed that another Federal division was pushing the Confederates back from the Potomac south of Ball's Bluff and Gorman's camp at South Ferry, that the commander of the army wished him to take Leesburg, a point four miles inland from the battlefield of Ball's Bluff, and that there were no Confederates in any force in that vicinity, as his scout truthfully reported. But the Confederates could move on shorter lines. They fooled Stone's subordinate, Gorman, at Edward's Ferry, and ignorance or negligence, perhaps both, led to the disaster at Ball's Bluff. Baker had discretion in his orders from Stone to call Devens back from the Virginia shore or re-enforce him there and fight. He chose to fight. GEORGE L. KILMER.

London's Daily Mosque. Probably not a hundred people other than those who frequent them are aware that there is a mosque where Mohammedan services are held in London as well as a chapel where the followers of the creed of Zoroaster can worship. Thus the Moslem and the Parsee are as much at home in the world's metropolis at the dawn of the twentieth century as they would be in their native lands, for when they are in their respective places of worship each can for the time forget that he is in a foreign country and be for the time being transported back to Asia. A brief 100 years ago and religious toleration would probably never have allowed Mohammedanism literally to build its temple in a Christian city.

Slot Machine Provides Meals. Slot machines providing meals have been introduced in London. The refreshments are arranged on a long buffet behind a glass screen. On putting four pennies one after another into the slot the screen rises and a tray holding a teapot, milk jug, sugar bowl and cup and saucer comes within reach. The teapot contains tea leaves and hot water can be drawn from a public tank. To pennies produce a roll with butter, or sandwiches, or bath buns, and other slots yield temperance drinks and confectionery.

Our Trade with Spain Booming. Trade relations between the United States and Spain have resumed the conditions existing between the two countries before the war. The exports from the United States to Spain in the fiscal year just ended were larger than in any preceding year with a single exception, 1883, and show an increase of $6,000,000 over 1889. Imports from Spain also show a marked increase over 1889.

PERRY'S VICTORY.

THE BRILLIANT NAVAL CAMPAIGN ON LAKE ERIE IN 1813.

Perry had to create a navy to fight the British—No Ships and No Men, but the Hero Was Undaunted—The Fight Won in Three Hours.

(Copyright, 1901, by G. L. Kilmer.)

Perry had no powerful navy at his back when he set out to redeem the northwest from the grasp of the British by fighting on Lake Erie. Only a few weeks before his famous victory, he appealed to the authorities in Washington in the following language: "Give me men, sir," he wrote his superior, "and I will acquire both for you and myself honor and glory on this lake or perish in the attempt." The scarcity of men was but one of the difficulties confronting Perry at that time. There were no ships until he built them, for the enemy had swept everything bearing the American flag from the waters, seized the vast territory of Michigan and were planning to extend the Dominion of Canada along the Ohio and Mississippi to the gulf. The recovery of Lake Erie was the first step toward checking British aggression, and to this heroic task Master Commodore Perry was called when he was but twenty-six years old. He had served in Tripoli and during the troubles with France, but was without actual experience as an organizer and commander.

Orders to go to the lakes reached the hero at his station in Newport, and he started in the middle of winter, with his thirteen-year-old brother James as his sole companion, through the wilderness then reaching from the valley of the Mohawk to the frozen northland. The journey was made in rude sleighs over wood paths and in canoes, and the only signs of human beings along the route were furnished by savages who hovered on the trail in expectation of plunder. Sacket's Harbor, on Lake Ontario, was the first port made. A few half-starved men, huddled around meager fires, were the only representatives of the naval personnel awaiting the future master of the lakes.

Among the citizens of the region, who were smugglers as a rule, there was no enthusiasm for armament or conflict, for they knew that armed officials of the United States would prove awkward neighbors. Proceeding finally to Erie, where several American keels had been laid down, Perry learned that the British meditated an attack upon that place to destroy the shipyards and materials, and his first step was to drill the shipwrights for defensive battle. Some volunteers were drawn into service, and before the British got ready to strike the brigades Lawrence and Niagara were ready for action. About that time also five ships were released from blockading duty at the mouth of Niagara river and ordered to join Perry. After buffeting about some days in constant danger of capture they reached Erie just as the British squadron hove in sight and blockaded the port. When at last the vessels were together, which was the middle of July, there were only enough men to man one ship. "Send me officers and men," wrote Perry, "and I will have the enemy in a day or two." In response to this appeal 300 sailors were given him to man ten warships.

Suddenly, when all was ready, the waters of the lake fell so low that it was impossible to get the ships over the bar without landing the guns and floating the hulls by means of scows. This proceeding under the eyes of the enemy would be suicidal, so Perry waited, and the British, finally abandoned their watch and sailed away over the lake. This was Aug. 2, and before daylight on the 3d, after a tedious operation unloading and hoisting by means of scows, the Lawrence and Niagara floated over the bar. Some British ships appeared and made a display of bunting and canvas, then sailed away north.

With his fleet fairly launched on the lakes Perry completed his equipment and with a force of 500 men and a limited supply of powder and ball followed the path of the enemy. After considerable maneuvering he got between the British fleet and its base of supplies on the 10th of September, and his opponent, Captain Barclay, a veteran who had fought under Nelson, was forced to surrender, starve or fight. As things stood it looked as though Perry was to be the under dog. The British outnumbered him in guns and in fighting men—that is, while the crews were about even man for man, the Britons were all seasoned fighters, while only 125 of the American crews had been in action. The rest were recruits, negroes and fever patients unable to man the guns.

Perry had triumphed over every obstacle by the force of enthusiasm. He wanted to fight and have it over. The promise, "I'll have the enemy in a day or two," was only an interpretation of his constant hope and ambition. When his ships stood out to sea pointed against the enemy, he called the sailors of the Lawrence about him and, holding up a flag bearing the dying words of the hero for whom the brig was named, "Don't give up the ship," said, "My brave lads, shall I hoist this?" The men answered, "Aye, aye, sir," with a shout that roared through the whole fleet. Cheer upon cheer came over the sea from the sister ships.

As the men went to quarters Perry followed and spoke a few words to each of the gun crews. Then he told his sailing master to run the ship to the leeward. "Then you'll have to engage the enemy to leeward, sir," was the response. "I don't care. To leeward or to windward, they shall fight today," said Perry.

The hearing of the youthful commander was not at all one of overconfidence. He felt the weight of responsibility and gave his orders in a firm, quiet tone. Every gun in the flagship was inspected by him before the battle opened. The total crew of the Lawrence fit for duty that day was 103 men and boys. She carried twenty guns, and the brig Niagara also mounted twenty cannon. The brig Caledonia, with five schooners and one sloop, completed the fleet, mounting in all fifty-four guns. Captain Barclay commanded two ships of war, two brigs, a schooner and a sloop, mounting sixty-three guns.

Perry so maneuvered as to bring the Lawrence alongside the British flagship at the onset of the fight, a shifting of the breeze placing his fleet to the windward of the enemy. The first shot was from Captain Barclay's flagship, the Detroit. It crashed through the bulwarks of the Lawrence, showering the men at the guns with splinters. The other leading ships of the British line also made the American flagship a steady target until she was disabled and captured.

The Lawrence suffered heavily from the concentrated fire of the British, and Perry made sail to get to closer quarters and bring his short range guns into play. His ship was instantly becalmed, and as his consorts could not come to his aid he fought against terrible odds, having to contend single handed with the British flagship and three others of Barclay's most powerful vessels. Gradually the guns of the Lawrence were disabled, and at last only one on her engaged side could be worked. At the end of one hour every brace and bowline had been shot away, her sails were in shreds and her spars shattered. All but twenty of her crew lay dead or wounded.

Often Perry's flagship was in danger of being blown up. One shot from the British guns knocked the snuff of a lighted candle into the magazine, but the spark was quickly extinguished by a gunner. Two cannon balls passed through the magazine. Owing to the shallowness of the hull of the Lawrence her cockpit, where the wounded lay, was above water line and exposed to British fire. Wounded men were killed while being carried below. Others were struck while in the surgeon's hands. Toward the close of the action the commander of the flagship told Perry that all his officers were down. "Can I have others?" he pleaded. Perry sent his own staff to the guns, but in a few minutes the lieutenant again appealed for help. Said he: "The officers you sent me have been cut down. Can I have more?" The surgeon's aids and finally all of the wounded who could pull a rope were called to the gun deck.

The Lawrence had been in action three hours and was completely helpless. Fortunately a breeze sprang up and carried her out of range. The Niagara then sailed to her, and Perry decided to transfer his flag to that ship. In an open boat he braved the fire of the British guns. As the boat hauled up to the side of the Niagara a clever shot bored through the slides. Perry stopped the leak with his coat and soon reached the deck of the Niagara.

Finding that the wounded on the Lawrence were being slaughtered by British fire her commander, Lieutenant Yarnall, hauled down the flag. As Perry was leaving the Lawrence a sailor tossed the flag bearing the motto, "Don't give up the ship," to him, and he unfurled it on the Niagara. Signal was then given for "close action," and the Niagara, running across the bow and stern of two British ships, raked them fore and aft with broadside fire. The carnage was awful, and the Niagara next got astern of the British brig Lady Prevost and raked her with the port battery.

All the other American ships followed the example of the Niagara. The British flagship lost all her masts, the Queen Charlotte, next in rank, was also disabled, and fifteen minutes after the Niagara closed with the enemy the British brig Hunter hoisted a white flag. Perry then lowered his pennant on the Niagara, boarded a yawl and made for the Lawrence again. "When he reached her, she was like a floating shambles. The decks were slippery with blood. Broken masts, gun carriages, dismantled cannon, coils of rope and shattered timbers were crimson with American gore. In the aft of the ship, surrounded by evidences of destruction and butchery, Perry received one by one the swords of the vanquished British officers. Then, with his cap for a writing table, the young hero wrote on the back of an old envelope taken from his pocket the immortal words which announced to the world his victory on Lake Erie. "We have met the enemy, and they are ours; two ships, two brigs, one schooner and one sloop,"

NEW GIRLS ON A YACHT.

Said Mr. Sherwood to the crew of the Perry, "I'll bring down some swell new girls Saturday evening."

Said the crew of the Perry to their girl friends: "If you come down Saturday, wear your good clothes for a change. We are going to have some swell new girls on board."

Then answered the girls, with much dignity, "Are you going to lay aside your old sweaters and duck trousers and dress up for those new girls?" "Never!" responded the crew as one man.

"Then why should we sacrifice ourselves?" asked the girls.

"Because we want you to make a good impression. We can do that without dressing up."

"You are even more conceited than we thought," replied the girls.

"Well, if you cannot dress up, stay at home," said the ungallant seamen.

"We will," the girls responded with emphasis.

Saturday night came. So did the swell new girls.

"This is the crew of the Perry," said Mr. Sherwood as the girls stepped aboard the yacht.

"Glad to meet you," said the crew. But the swell new girls said nothing. They only nodded carelessly and went to the bow, leaving the crew in the stern.

"They don't seem so dreadfully pleased to meet us," commented the skipper, sailing off on the port tack.

"It is my turn to talk to the new girls," said Eddie. "You had your innings with the last ones."

So Eddie rolled up the sleeves of his striped shirt, which was evidently a relic of former grandeur, and started in to fascinate the new girls. Jack followed. Then the men in the cockpit wished for the girls who usually sailed with them.

In a few minutes Jack came back. "It's your turn, Chet," he said. "I have a chill."

New girl No. 1 was talking earnestly with Mrs. Sherwood.

New girl No. 2 was talking to Eddie. New girl No. 3 did not look very approachable, but Chet went forward, determined to entertain her, for she appeared homesome.

"Do you like sailing?" he asked, wishing to say something original.

"Yes," answered the girl, adjusting her glasses, and staring at Chet's duck trousers, which had seen whiter days.

"We have had lovely sailing weather," remarked Chet.

No answer.

"Don't you think we have?" persisted Chet.

"I don't know, I am sure," and the girl lifted her eyebrows.

Chet murmured something about taking care of the jib sheet and sneaked back to ask the boys for an overcoat.

In the meantime Eddie was enjoying himself immensely. New girl No. 2 had examined him critically as if he were a species of animal. Then she had said sympathetically:

"Don't you get dreadfully tired on the boat?"

"No. Why?" Eddie spoke in a surprised tone.

"Oh, it must be awful to go out in all kinds of weather and risk your life. But then," she added, with an engaging smile, "a sailor has to be very brave or he wouldn't choose that calling."

Eddie, being a lawyer, was about to remark that he knew of things which took more courage than sailing, but he did not have time, for the girl asked:

"Are you well paid for running the boat?"

"No," answered Eddie sadly as he thought of the money he was paying for the privilege of sailing.

Then she advised him to join the Downtrodden Employees' association and said seriously, "Do you drink?"

Eddie's first impulse was to say: "No, do you?" Seeling, however, that she was anxious to do some reforming he answered, "Yes."

She then talked to him of the evil effects of liquor and the dangers of a sailor's life and begged him to promise not to drink any more. Then as the boat landed he looked into her eyes and said earnestly, "I'll promise ye, miss, and I want to tell ye I'll not forget ye."

The new girls left the yacht well satisfied with their conduct. As they crossed the viaduct new girl No. 3 said, "Two of that crew were very presumptuous, but I squeaked them."

Mr. Sherwood looked amazed. "Why, I never knew those boys to be anything but gentlemen," he said.

"The one with whom I was talking," interrupted girl No. 3, "knew his place perfectly, and he seemed quite intelligent."

"Quite intelligent!" shouted Mr. Sherwood. "He ought to be. He is a graduate of a university, an ex-member of the legislature and may be president of the United States some day."

"Why," said new girl No. 2, "I thought he was a sailor and tried to make him promise to go to the mission and told him his clothes wouldn't make any difference. I got him to give up drinking too."

"That is rich. He is one of the most exemplary young men in society and a millionaire."

The girls voted that in future they wouldn't judge men by their clothes, and the men voted to stick to their sailor girls.—Buffalo News.

"Talk is cheap," said the proverbial monger.

"That's right," answered Senator Sorghum. "The time is past in my part of the country when a man can get off by going around making speeches and not spending a cent."

INVALIDED BY FASHION.

Poor Health of Girls Is Due to Overwork in Becoming Accomplished.

To learn as many of the fashionable accomplishments as possible appears to be the ambition of the girl of the period and her mamma. It is too often the case that considerations of physical health are entirely overlooked and that the fashionable girl finds herself worn out and old in appearance and disposition before she has reached the age of 23. The Ladies' Home Journal characterizes this folly properly when it says: "There are parents who, not content with the studies which their daughters have to grapple with at school, load them down with a few special studies in the finer arts. I have in mind now several young girls between the precarious ages of 12 and 17, who, after they return from school, have an extra dose of painting, music or languages. But my daughter must know something of these things," is the protest of the fond mother. "She must be able to hold her own with other girls of her set." Of course, the girl at this tender age, with such a mental load, soon goes to pieces. She becomes anemic, listless and nervous, and then the mother wonders why! To build her up everything under the sun is tried except a lessening of mental work and the unnatural strain upon the nervous system. The girl develops into what? A bundle of nerves incased in the most fragile frame, her physical vitality sapped almost to the last drop. And in this condition she enters the marriage state! And yet we wonder why there are so few women absolutely free from organic troubles. Is it so inexplicable?"

Swiss People Was Fat on Tourists.

Life is pleasant in central Switzerland, where all the countries of civilization go to seek rest and health. The whole of this country is a pleasure resort, a reserve set apart as a playground by common consent, much as Canada has created the National Park at Banff, or the United States the Yellowstone. No other nation must trespass on Switzerland, or take bites out of her; she belongs to all, and her people have accepted the role of amusement caterers with a seriousness beyond all praise. The children at school have respect for the foreigner dinned into them persistently; he is the industry of the country, and must be cultivated.

Serum for Snake Bites.

Dr. Calmette of the Pasteur Institute in London recently had to use his own serum for snake bite. His finger was bitten while he was collecting the venom, and he attributes to the serum his escape with simple inflammation only.

ENDED HIS LIFE BY HIS OWN HAND

SUICIDE OF JOHN HAIGHT AT WAUWATOSA YESTERDAY.

Committed the Act Under Despondency from the Mental Trouble of Which He Was Suffering—A Great Shock to His Many Friends in Rock County.

The relatives and friends of the late John Haight, whose death at Wauwatosa was announced in last evening's Gazette, have been shocked to learn that he ended his life by his own hand while suffering from the despondency which was the chief characteristic of mental trouble from which he suffered.

The telegram which came to H. S. Johnson contained no particulars, simply saying that Mr. Haight had died as the result of an accident. Later dispatches received last evening revealed the fact that Mr. Haight had hanged himself some time during Wednesday night. He was found by the startled attendants at the sanitarium conducted by Dr. Dewey at Wauwatosa, yesterday morning hanging to a tree just outside the building. In some manner during the night Haight had escaped from the attendant who had been sleeping in the room with him, and climbed out of the window. He had made directly for a tree, to which a hammock was suspended, and "detaching" the rope, hanged himself.

Mr. Haight had been at the hospital for about ten days. This was his second time at the institution, the first time being some time in the middle of September, when he spent about two weeks there. The chronic ailment from which he was suffering was senile melancholia, his haunting fear being that he was destined to become a helpless imbecile. He was believed to be cured at the end of his first stay at the hospital and was brought home but as the symptoms of his malady began to show themselves again he was taken to the sanitarium a second time.

H. S. Johnson, whose wife is a niece of Mr. Haight, accompanied the aged gentleman to Wauwatosa, and did his best to cheer him up, but Mr. Haight insisted that Mr. Johnson would never see him alive again.

Dr. Dewey of the sanitarium, said that Mr. Haight had been progressing favorably, and it was thought he would be able to go to his home in a short time. His action in committing suicide was entirely unexpected, and was a great surprise to the hospital authorities. The coroner was notified, and the jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts. The remains were not taken to the morgue.

Mr. Haight's death was a great shock to his many friends in this city and throughout the county. He was one of the most prominent as well as one of the most prosperous farmers in the county and had always taken an active interest in public affairs. The fact that for many years he was chairman of the board of supervisors at Johnstown, although he was a democrat in a republican county, is one of the many evidences of the high esteem in which he was held and the great confidence placed in him by his fellow townsmen.

He began to fall in mental strength about three months ago and suffered greatly from insomnia. Physicians declared that the trouble was due to thickening of blood in the brain. No cause for the mental attack is known except that he never seemed to recover from the mental attack caused by the death of a favorite daughter from a surgical operation about seven years ago. He was a clear-headed cool business man, and until the last three months had been considered a man of exceptionally strong balance.

James Haight of Johnstown, the deceased man's son and George Hull, of Otter's corners, his son-in-law, went to Milwaukee and took the remains home to Johnstown this morning. The interment will be in the cemetery at Johnstown where his wife and daughter are buried and the funeral services will probably be held Sunday afternoon.

PLAN FOR M'KINLEY MONUMENT; FUNDS ARE COMING IN RAPIDLY

Meeting of the Executive Committee in Senator Hanna's Office at Cleveland Yesterday—Statement Issued on Object of Association.

The executive committee of the McKinley Memorial association held its first meeting yesterday afternoon at the office of Senator Hanna in Cleveland, O. William B. Day, president of the association; Senator Hanna, vice president; Elyson Ritchie, secretary; William Lynch, of Canton, H. C. Payne of Milwaukee, Alexander H. Revell of Chicago and Senator Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana.

Plans Were Considered.

Plans of organizations were considered. The secretary reported active work throughout the entire country and gratifying results. It was decided to have a central auxiliary committee in each state and territory. The local associations which are being organized everywhere will report to the state organizations.

Authority was given President Day to appoint a number of prominent representatives of social and benevolent associations, commercial and labor organizations, educational, religious and patriotic bodies and to enlist every interest that desires to aid in raising the national memorial fund.

Now that elections are over, the work will be actively pushed. Interested citizens everywhere are invited to lend their assistance. Souvenir receipts are to be designed at once and will soon be ready for distribution to the contributors through the several state auxiliaries.

Object of Association.

A statement was adopted embodying the object of the McKinley National Memorial association. It says, in part: "The McKinley national memorial is intended to be the affectionate tribute of the United States to a great and good man. That it is to be the people's thank offering that our national honor stands inviolent and their pledge of loyalty to law and order, and to embody the highest attainment in American art in a commemorative structure, which for beauty of form, symbolic expression and true dignity shall be the noblest the world has ever seen."

"The National memorial will be raised over President McKinley's grave in the city of his home. It was his own expressed desire, and the wish of those most dear to him, that his remains should find their last resting place where the bodies of his little children lay buried."

A Charming Luncheon.

Mrs. Getrude Barber, of Rockford, Ill., was the guest of honor at a charming afternoon luncheon given for her yesterday afternoon by her sister, Mrs. F. F. Stevens, at whose home she is a guest. Although Mrs. Stevens has not recovered from a severely sprained ankle and was forced to receive her guests from the couch to which her injury confined her, her welcome was none the less cordial and she was ably assisted by her daughter, Mrs. W. A. Jackson, who assumed the duties of hostess and the pleasant responsibility of entertaining her mother's guests very graciously. The afternoon was pleasantly passed at card tables, the ladies indulging in the favorite social game of six handed euchre. Mrs. E. F. Carpenter was favored by fortune and captured the handsome prize which was the lucky number 312.

After the card playing a dainty and very elegant luncheon was served and this was followed by a brief season of general sociability and reluctant good-nights.

MILTON.

THE GAZETTE AGENCY,
W. W. CLARK, Manager.

Milton, Nov. 8.—The entertainments by Smith and Gorton were largely attended and gave universal satisfaction. Mr. Smith in his impersonations of female characters has imitated and is now letter perfect, while his "Zachariah Spicer" is as great a rib-cracker as of yore. His "sand-pictures" are a genuine novelty and a wonderful display of skill. Mr. Gorton in his impersonations is an artist in that line, his making up in full view of the audience adding a new zest to the act. His monologue work is excellent, and the play modeling a novel and pleasing feature.

The funeral of the late Oliver Livingston took place at the house on Wednesday afternoon, Rev. T. W. North officiating. Deceased was one of the old settlers of Milton and had been in feeble health for some time, being a victim of muscular rheumatism. He leaves an aged wife and four sons and one daughter. There is no catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it incurable and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proved catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. Red Spark Explodes Dynamite.

"You've got to have a red spark," said a workman, "to set off dynamite. I've handled it long enough to know. Here's an experiment that's been tried: They took an old flat car and loaded it with rocks; then they fastened a box of dynamite to the bumper and let the car run down a steep grade, bang! into another car anchored at the bottom. And they found that the dynamite never exploded unless the bumpers were faced with iron. It didn't matter how much concussion they got with wooden bumpers, the dynamite was like fast much putty, but as soon as a red spark jumped into it out of the box it exploded."

WHY THE STONE CASE WORRIES EUROPE

The strange case of Miss Stone, the American missionary who was captured by brigands in Turkey, has an international aspect that is being carefully considered by the various governments interested. Just such a case might be the means of involving not only Turkey and Bulgaria in war, but the whole of Europe and the United States. The reason for this is apparent when the affair is studied in all its lights.

Should the theory that Miss Stone's capture originated with the Macedonian committee be proved there would be no doubt that its purpose was to embroil the United States with Turkey and thus hasten the overthrow of the tottering Ottoman empire. It is a notorious fact that the Macedonians have been working tooth and nail to find some way of causing Turkey trouble that would at the same time give them an opportunity to break away from the suzerainty of the sultan.

Macedonia was formerly a Bulgarian province, and, naturally enough, the Macedonians have been egged on in their designs by the authorities of Bulgaria. Not only so, but they have been openly supported by Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, who has raised a large army to assist them when the revolution begins. The inhabitants of the province, who are Christians, are descended from the same stock and have largely intermarried with the Bulgarians. The two peoples are thus united not only by ties of polity, but of blood.

The Macedonians are now suffering from Turkish persecutions. Similar persecutions caused the Turco-Russian war of 1877. By the treaty of peace which followed the conclusion of this war the sultan granted to the Macedonians independence similar to that enjoyed by the Bulgarians, but a conference of European powers restored the province to Turkey, upon guaran-teria with the customary speech from the throne. He made no reference whatever to the kidnapping of Miss Stone.

The nearest he came to it was in saying that Bulgaria has been trying her best to keep on good terms with the powers. Immediately afterward he gave a thrust at Turkey by avowing that his government had especially labored to strengthen the bonds of friendship with "our liberator, Russia," pointing as evidence to the courtesies to Grand Duke Alexander, a cousin of the czar, during the grand duke's recent visit to Sofia.

The Macedonian committee looks to Prince Ferdinand and, more remotely, to Russia to aid it in its struggle against the sultan. This committee is a part of the national existence. It is a peculiar organization, to say the least. Its former officers were deposed last summer because of racecraft. The old president, Boris Sarafoff, is a notorious desperado. He was recently acquitted of murder, though it is said that he was undoubtedly guilty and had been engaged in a blackmailing scheme to raise money for the revolution. By a singular coincidence he disappeared two days after the kidnapping of Miss Stone.

The new president, Mikhailovsky, is a well known poet. Like his present confederates in office, he has the reputation of being an honorable man. Not long ago he published an article denouncing the kidnapping and expressing regret that it might prejudice the European public against the movement for Macedonian independence.

That his fears were well founded is shown by the fact that just preceding the outrage various European governments had begun to hear themselves in the interests of Macedonia. It was recognized by Russia and France especially that the misgovernment in that province, the excesses committed in Armenia and the dissatisfaction in Crete had reached such a point as to constitute a menace to peace. The European powers, therefore, at the instance of the two just mentioned, had begun to discuss plans for a joint representation to the sultan.

Indeed, so far had this idea developed that it was planned to eventually oblige the sultan not only to carry out the clauses of the treaty of Berlin relating to Macedonia and Armenia, but to give guarantees for further reforms and the settlement of numerous pending questions. Russia had thoroughly sounded Germany on the subject, and the support of England, Austria and Italy was considered certain. Small wonder that President Mikhailovsky was alarmed at the effect the capture of Miss Stone might have upon the project.

One American who openly proclaimed his belief in the complicity of the Macedonian committee is Charles M. Dickinson, the United States consul general at Constantinople, who went to Samakov to superintend personally the measures taken for the liberation of the missionary. Mr. Dickinson is well known as a lawyer, poet and newspaper man. He is the editor and proprietor of the Binghamton (N. Y.) Republican and has the reputation of being a most persuasive speaker, a tees that a Christian governor would be appointed and that persecution and excessive taxation would cease. True to tradition, the sultan has neglected to fulfill these conditions. In consequence of this the Macedonians are in a continual state of belligerency.

Reverting to the Stone case, the Macedonians, if the charges against them are true, may have counted on the inaccessibility of Bulgaria to turn all of Uncle Sam's wrath upon Turkey, which is the principal power responsible for Bulgaria, inasmuch as it receives a certain amount of tribute from that country. They would thus be able to use the United States as a cat paw to pluck freedom for themselves.

Such an idea would prove erroneous if recent reports are true. It is asserted that the United States government has been quietly sounding European powers on the important question of an approach to Bulgaria. This could only be done by the powers waiving the objections to the passage of the Dardanelles. Thus all Europe has become involved in the complications arising out of the kidnapping of Miss Stone.

Should it be necessary for the United States to make a demonstration in Turkish waters there are plenty of warships available for that purpose. The Chicago, Admiral Cromwell's flagship, is now at Leghorn, where the Albany is also stationed; at Genoa is the Nashville; the Dixie and the Monongahela are at Villefranche; the Buffalo is at Madiera. All these could be assembled at very short notice, forming a fleet that would make a very formidable showing.

One feature of the affair which has given gossip mongers much to talk about, and which has been an apparent corroboration of the theory that Miss Stone's abduction should be laid at the door of the Macedonians, has been the apathy of Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria. This potentate, who is the constitutional ruler of Bulgaria by virtue of the treaty signed by the powers in convention at Berlin in 1878, recently opened the national assembly of Bul-

Seen Her Sister Murdered.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 8.—While in a jealous rage, in the presence of his sister-in-law, Fred Beck, the colored porter in a barber shop here, shot and instantly killed his wife, Viola, aged 21. Afterward he went to the county jail and gave himself up to Sheriff Woods. Beck and his wife had quarreled early in the day and he returned home about 3 o'clock and found his wife ready to go to the home of a friend. He objected and the quarrel was renewed. Beck fired three shots into his wife's body. Death was instantaneous. He claims he committed the deed in self-defense, as his wife had threatened to end his life.

Lawyer Adjudged Insane.

Kenosha, Wis., Nov. 8.—Henry Wiesman, a member of the Kenosha county bar for over thirty years and a prominent Democratic politician, was pronounced insane in the county court by Judge Slosson. The complainants were a number of neighbors of the town of Brighton, against some of whom Attorney Wiesman had brought suit for damages on account of being sent to an asylum two years ago. Mr. Wiesman was not present at the trial. He left home last Saturday, saying he was going to church in Chicago Sunday, since which time no trace of him can be found.

Exploding Lamp Kills Two.

South Norwalk, Conn., Nov. 8.—Mrs. Guy Pimbell of Norwalk attempted to replenish the oil in a lighted lamp and an explosion followed, which scattered the blazing oil in all directions. Mrs. Pimbell and her three children were covered with the burning liquid, and two of them—Rose, aged 8 years, and Louis, aged 5—were burned to death. The mother and another daughter, Catherine, were also terribly burned and were removed to a hospital, where it was stated that neither would live.

As Successor to Wu.

Pekin, Nov. 8.—The appointment of Yuan Shi-kai as viceroy of Chi-li meets with the general approval of both natives and foreigners. His administration of the Province of Shan-tung during the troubles gave ample evidence of his ability and wisdom. The appointment of Wang Wen-shao as plenipotentiary is also good.

Adolph Robert Kraus Dead.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 8.—Adolph Robert Kraus, the Boston sculptor, who designed the figure of "Victory," which surmounted Machinery hall at the Chicago world's fair, died at Danvers Hospital. Poverty prevented him from completing his magnificent figure of "Belshazzar seeing the writing on the wall," and the disappointment drove him to his death.

Germany Buys Coal Here.

New York, Nov. 8.—There has been a marked increase recently in foreign orders for American anthracite coal, especially from Germany. The demand abroad is said to be due largely to labor troubles in Wales and France, resulting in a curtailment of supplies from these countries.

Permits Train to Kill Him.

Washington, Ind., Nov. 8.—John McGillem, an old soldier, aged sixty-seven, committed suicide at Petersburg by advancing toward a rapidly approaching passenger train. He leaves a wife and several children. He was despondent.

German Deficit Grows.

Berlin, Nov. 8.—The German imperial deficit has heretofore been estimated at 100,000,000 marks ($25,000,000). It is now asserted that the budget will assume a deficit of 140,000,000 marks ($35,000,000).

Torpedo Boats and Steam.

Contrary to the general belief the engines of torpedo boats are not at all extravagant in the use of steam, but approach high economy, considering that they are driven regardless of cost the sole view being to get the highest possible piston speed in the shortest time with forced draft of greatest intensity. The coal burned per initial horse power in the case of one boat recently constructed was only 1.88 pounds per hour, with a consumption of sixty-eight pounds per square foot of gas.—Chicago News.

A Talented Designer.

Walter Crane, the decorative artist, is one of the most talented men in England. He is a teacher and writer in art, a book illustrator, a painter, a designer of furniture, glass, mosaic, wall paper and fabric. He is besides a poet, lecturer and a fearless socialist.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Cripple

Who is crippled by accident or deformity hardly understands the meaning of the word "crippled" as compared with the victim of rheumatism. He is not only bent and twisted, but also racked with pain so cruel that he envies the cripple who stumps along on a wooden leg, whistling as he goes. Rheumatism is known to-day as a blood disease. It can only be cured through the blood.

That powerful blood-purifying medicine, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, cleanses the blood of the acid poisons which cause rheumatism. When the blood is cleansed the rheumatism is cured. There is no alcohol in "Golden Medical Discovery" and it is absolutely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

Mr. A. J. McKnight, of Cades, Williamsburg County, S. C., writes: "I had been troubled with rheumatism for twelve years, so bad at times I could not leave my bed. I was badly crippled. Tried many doctors, and two of them gave me up to die. None of them did me any good. The pains in my back, hips and legs (and at times in my head), would nearly kill me. My appetite was very bad. Everybody who saw me said I must die. I took five bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and four vials of 'Pellea,' and to-day my health is good, after suffering twelve years with rheumatism."

The sluggish liver can be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Rushing to her husband's rescue, Mrs. Julius Yankee met death by fire. The husband, equally heroic, was seriously, if not fatally, injured, for after his wife had extinguished the flames that had seized his clothing he turned to aid her and barely escaped with his life. The tragedy occurred in the kitchen of the couple's home in the flat building at 151 Larrabee street. Yankee's clothing had caught fire while he was melting tar, which boiled over.
